A Look Back...

Defensive Headliner

To give you an idea of the disparity between Nebraska and Iowa State Saturday, Doug DuBose rushed for more than eight times as many yards as the whole Iowa State team.

DuBose, NU's sophomore I-back, gained 134 yards on 12 carries and is honored as Huskers Illustrated's Offensive Player of the Game for the third time this season.

Iowa State, of course, netted only 16 yards rushing on 34 attempts.

DuBose got 80 of his on the first play in the fourth quarter when the Cyclones knew the Huskers were going to run a counter sweep.

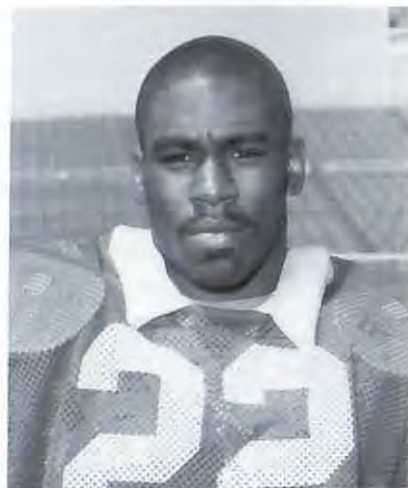

DuBose admitted he had reservations about the play when he got to the line of scrimmage and heard an Iowa State linebacker warning his teammates: "Watch for a counter sweep."

Nebraska faced a first-and-10 at its own 20. "I thought maybe we were going to audible since they knew where the play was going," DuBose said.

No audible was called and the Cyclones pursued to stop a counter sweep.

"It looked kind of clogged up," DuBose said. So "I cut back across the grain and a guy hit me in the thigh."

He was the last ISU defender to make significant contact with DuBose, who started Nebraska's 28-point fourth-quarter explosion after also scoring on a six-yard touchdown run with 7:00 remaining in the third quarter.

Doug DuBose

"I never think they're going to stop me," DuBose said. "I always expect to make five or six yards. But I didn't expect to go 80 yards on that play."

According to DuBose, Nebraska's slow-starting offense needed to hit stride against the Cyclones.

"We were trying to put points on the board for the defense," he said. "We owed it to them."

Earlier this season, DuBose earned Player of the Game honors for his relief role in a loss at Syracuse and his 134-yard effort on 14 carries against Missouri.

DuBose's six-yard TD gave Nebraska a 16-0 cushion and his 80-yarder opened the fourth-quarter floodgates.

"It was only a matter of time until things broke open," DuBose said. "We were coming at them pretty hard and it showed in the fourth quarter. It was just a matter of waking up to some things they were doing."

Offensive Headliner

Last year, Nebraska defensive end Bill Weber was a picture of dejection following the Huskers' 72-29 win over Iowa State in Lincoln.

Weber was chagrined that the Black Shirts could give up 503 yards total offense and was convinced that Nebraska needed to change its defensive philosophy with regard to pass-oriented teams.

Saturday, in Ames, was a different story.

Nebraska had completely checked the Cyclones' aerial attack and Weber was one of the biggest reasons why.

His third-quarter interception broke open a tight 10-0 game and earned him the honor as Huskers Illustrated's Defensive Player of the Game.

"Bill's interception was certainly a big play," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said. "At that time, Iowa State was still in the ball game and they had the wind. That interception was kind of a back-breaker."

Indeed it was. If there is such a thing as a turning point in a 44-0 game, Weber was it.

Weber turned this game around with 7:03 left in the third quarter, stepping in front of Cyclone wide receiver Tracy Henderson, stealing the ball and returning it 25 yards to the ISU six-yard line.

Doug DuBose scored on the next play and the nail-biter started to turn into a rout.

"They still had the wind at their backs," Weber said. "I was worried that one play could get 'em back in the ball game."

For Iowa State, one play just as easily took the Cyclones out of the game.

Weber, who led the Huskers with five solo tackles, noticed Iowa State had a man in motion.

Bill Weber

"That's a good indication that he'll try a crossing pattern," he said.

"I saw the receiver out of the corner of my eye," Weber said. "I knew the quarterback had no idea where I was. So I just kind of sat there and waited till he threw. He hadn't seen me. He threw it right to me."

NU defensive end Coach George Darlington said the interception was the first by a first-team Husker defensive end since Scott Strasburger had one last season.

"Brad Tyrer had one this year, but it's been a long time for the starters," Darlington said.

Weber's interception was one of six turnovers caused by the Black Shirts and one of four interceptions. The six turnovers represented a season high for an NU defense that now ranks No. 1 in total defense.

"We haven't gotten the turnovers we'd like this season," Weber said. "We set a goal each game of three or four and we've fallen short of that probably 90 percent of the time."

The Training Room

Nebraska came away from the Iowa State game almost totally unscathed, injury-wise.

"About the only thing we got was a thigh bruise to (freshman monster) Brian Washington," NU Head Trainer George Sullivan said.

I-back Jeff Smith also bruised a rib, "so we held him out most of the second half," Sullivan said.

Smith should be at full strength for Saturday's game at Kansas.

day's game at Kansas.

Osborne said Sunday that I-back Paul Miles, sidelined the past five weeks with a dislocated shoulder, probably will make the travel squad to Kansas.

"Everything being equal, we may take Paul Miles to Kansas and not take Keith Jones," Osborne said. "But if Jeff Smith is still having trouble, we might have to take four I-backs."

Scouting Around...

The Opponent....

To almost everyone, Kansas is the surprise team of the Big Eight this season.

The Jayhawks were picked to finish at or near the bottom of the conference.

Yet there they are, standing a conspicuous fourth in the league standings. Their 3-2 record trails only the 5-0 by Nebraska and 3-1 marks by Oklahoma and Oklahoma State.

Kansas opened the conference season with an impressive 33-14 win over Iowa State.

Hopes of optimism, however, quickly vanished with back-to-back road losses at Kansas State (24-7) and Oklahoma State (47-10).

Then the Jayhawks woke up a nation, scoring a 28-11 upset win over the second-ranked Oklahoma Sooners in Lawrence.

This past weekend, that roll continued with a 28-27 win at Colorado.

"We've gained a healthy appreciation for Colorado football," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said. "Kansas must have played very well at Colorado, too. They're a very dangerous team right now. We certainly can't relax at this point."

Even if the Jayhawks can't upset Nebraska, they are looking at a first-division conference finish if they can close the season with a win at Missouri Nov. 17.

"Of course, there's an outside chance they can still figure in the conference championship," Osborne pointed out.

"Kansas is obviously a team on the upswing," Osborne said. "I imagine the low point of their season was the loss to Kansas State. But they've certainly rebounded from that."

Osborne said the Jayhawks have prospered because of a defense "that's better than what it was" and the leadership of Mike Norseth, a 6-3, 205-pound junior quarterback.

"I don't know if he's exceed their expectations or not. But he's a good player," Osborne said of Norseth, who threw two fourth-quarter touchdown passes in the weekend win at Colorado.

Norseth completed 16 of 26 passes for 205 yards. For the season, he now has 113 completions in 196 attempts for 1,378 yards and seven touchdowns.

Wide receiver Skip Peete is his favorite target. He's caught 30 passes for 311 yards.

Tailback Lynn Williams, who rushed for 120 yards at Colorado, leads the Jayhawks in rushing with 675 and a 4.9 per carry average.

Osborne considers the injured Robert Mimbs, who has 435 yards rushing and 233 yards receiving in six games, perhaps KU's most dangerous threat.

Nebraska has won the last 15 games and leads the series, 66-21-4. The Huskers have actually played KU better in Lawrence than they have in Lincoln.

NU's last seven wins in Lawrence have produced a 353-44 point difference. The Huskers last eight victories in Lincoln have produced a 294-61 point difference.

The Nebraska-Kansas series equals the third-oldest NCAA Division I-A series, trailing Minnesota-Wisconsin (93 games) and Kansas-Missouri (92 games).

The Huskers and Jayhawks have met every year since 1906, making the series the second longest continuous series in I-A, trailing only Kansas-Oklahoma (81 games since 1903).

Quotes 'N Notes

Iowa State Coach Jim Criner said it after his Cyclones lost, 44-0, to Nebraska: "I think because of their special teams and their defense, they probably are a better overall team than last year."

Nebraska defensive end Coach George Darlington said it after Gregg Reeves, a junior defensive end from Wahoo, Neb., intercepted a fourth-quarter pass: "I call him grandpa. Everybody calls him grandpa."

He's got two kids and a farm...he even looks old."

Defensive end Scott Strasburger: "I know Iowa State was throwing the ball up for grabs, if Reeves got an interception."

Reeves: "I owe the interception to Strasburger. He's dropped so many this year, we have to practice catching the ball 10 minutes after practice every night."

The Coaches' Evaluation

Saturday, Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne went out on a limb.

"This was one of the better defensive games I think we've played since I've been head coach," he said.

Sunday, Osborne didn't feel the need to modify that statement. Even after more intense film evaluation, he still considered it one of the Huskers' best defensive performances in his 12 years as head coach.

"We played awfully well on defense," Osborne said. "That's one of the lowest total yardage outputs we've ever had."

The Huskers held Iowa State to 53 total yards — 16 yards rushing on 34 attempts and 37 yards passing on 20 attempts.

That means on 54 offensive plays, the Cyclones averaged 1.0 yard.

"I'm sure there may have been others that were equal to it, but this was one of the finest efforts I've seen," Osborne said.

NU Sports Information Director Don Bryant said Sunday that the 53 yards total offense was the lowest by an NU opponent since the Huskers checked Kansas State to a minus 45 yards in 1976.

It was the first shutout for Nebraska in 26 games, dating back to a 52-0 win over Kansas in 1982. Iowa State hadn't been shut out in 41 games — since Nebraska blanked the Cyclones, 35-0, in 1980.

"We were very pleased just to win the game," Osborne said. "I had no idea it would turn out like this."

Nebraska's head coach admitted the score did not reflect the game.

"The tragic thing for Iowa State is when you look at the final score, it looks like they didn't play," Osborne said. "But they played pretty hard."

Osborne admitted he was surprised that the Huskers shut the Cyclones down "without blitzing."

The Huskers had two or three blitzes in the game plan all week, but never used them...not once. They also played strict zone pass defense, from opening kickoff to final gun.

Osborne said 30-mile-an-hour gusts made the wind "more a factor than any game for several years. Generally, if you're a passing team, the wind affects you more."

That does not diminish what Osborne considered a superlative effort on Cyclone wide receiver Tracy Henderson, the Big Eight's all-time leading receiver.

The Huskers checked Henderson to two catches for 11 yards. They also forced Iowa State into six turnovers — four on interceptions and two on fumbles.

A look ahead...

Nebraska vs. Kansas

THE WAY THEY SEE IT

Chuck Woodling, Lawrence Journal-World: "The Jayhawks are certainly an amazing story, and obviously the surprise team of the Big Eight. There's no really rational explanation for this. Early in the year they had all kinds of bad luck, losing their fastest wide receiver to injury and a couple others. It seemed like every week something bad was happening to them. They were getting hammered on the road.

"Then, all of a sudden their luck changed. Against Iowa State they got eight turnovers. After losses to Kansas State and Oklahoma State, everybody thought they were finished again. Then they got their first real big break when Oklahoma had to use a freshman quarterback on the road. The Jayhawks got an unbelievable break.

"Three wins was a miracle in itself. Then they go to Colorado and got another miracle. They came back from 27-16 to lead 28-27, but Colorado had a 33-yard field goal try, a gimme, to win it...and the holder bobbled the snap.

Colorado was going to kick a 33-yard field goal to win it, a gimme, straight on, no win. The holder bobbled the snap. First win on the road, first time this season won two straight. Only five seniors and three of them play.

It's hard to say that against Nebraska. They've have to come with top three running backs injured or top two quarterbacks. The Jayhawks simply have to have mistakes to have an opportunity to win. They have to count on other team's mistakes to win. Their defense just isn't strong enough up front.

I don't think any way rationally say Kansas in the same league with Nebraska. But you could say that Kansas have proved this year they're an opportunistic team. They play hard, but have to have the mistakes.

Randy York, Lincoln Journal-Star: "I know Kansas has gained the respect of the league by thumping Oklahoma and coming from behind to win at Colorado. I know the Jayhawks conceivably could even figure into the conference championship, if they upset Nebraska and beat Missouri in their season finale.

"But even though I know all of this, I cannot help thinking this is the same team that lost to Kansas State by 17 points. Something is crazy here and I think part of the answer is reflected on KU's two-deep depth chart. The Jayhawks list six freshman starters and seven freshman backups. You may get Oklahoma looking past those greenhorns, but not Nebraska. I don't think it will even be close. Nebraska 41, Kansas 7."

Steve Richardson, Kansas City Star: "Kansas has been on a roll recently, but tradition says it will stop this week, especially at Lawrence. Kansas' small defensive line should be no match for Nebraska's offense, despite the Jayhawks' recent success against the likes of Oklahoma and Colorado.

"Nebraska will probably shred the wheat. The Jayhawks won't get to wave it."

THE WAY WE SEE IT

Huskers Illustrated: "After two weeks of runaways, almost everybody in the Big Eight is ready to concede the title to Nebraska. That may not be what Husker Coach Tom Osborne wants to hear, however, especially since Kansas is coming off of the decisive victory over Oklahoma and narrow triumph over Colorado and boasting a 3-2 conference mark coming into the game.

"Still, the Huskers are proving difficult to handle with only two conference games remaining. And it's no secret that Nebraska seems to own Lawrence, Kansas. Since Tom Osborne took over the coaching reigns from Bob Devaney in 1973, the Huskers have outscored Kansas in Lawrence, 256-24, or an average of 51-5.

"Like Iowa State, and even Colorado, the Nebraska-Kansas score may be close...for awhile. Don't count on it being close at the end. Nebraska 54, Kansas 6."
